The Pullampet project, Cuddapah district.

602 Q.—Mr. B. P. Devarajulu Nayudu: Will the hon. the Law Member be pleased to state—

(1) when the investigation of the Pullampet project in the Cuddapah district was finally completed;

(2) what the estimated cost of the project is; and what area could be brought under its irrigation and in what villages of the taluk;

(3) why the Government have not taken up the execution of the project;

(4) whether any other projects more promising than this in the Pennar Basin have been investigated;

(5) what those projects are, their estimated cost, and area of land that could be brought under irrigation; and

(6) whether any of these projects have been taken up for execution and if not, for what reasons they are allowed to lie over?

A.—(1) The investigation of the project was completed in 1905.

(2) The scheme is estimated to cost Rs. 66·30 lakhs and to irrigate 70,000 acres in the Pullampet taluk. Details of villages are not available.

(3) The investigation of 1905 having showed that the scheme was not sufficiently promising, gauging observations are being made in the river to determine whether the project deserves further investigation.
